Committeemen Holyoke & Cooper by Ed Chase

October 5, 1675, and the Indian raid that destroyed most of Springfield's buildings and foodstuffs also brought death to two of Suffield's original proprietors. Neither of these two prominent men ever settled in Suffield.

Elizur Holyoke, John Pynchon's "ancient friend," married John's sister and was second only to John in prominence during the early settlement years. Holyoke served as Captain of the Hampshire Regiment, Town Recorder, and a member of the General Court of Boston. During an early exploration up the Connecticut River, the highest peak in the traprock mountain range on the east side of the "Great River" was named Mount Holyoke.

Holyoke died in Springfield on February 5, 1776, during the terrible winter following the October fires that destroyed shelter, sustenance and comfort for Springfield's early settlers.

His son, Captain Samuel Holyoke, continued to serve the struggling settlement with his service in the militia. Following the death of Captain Turner during the battle at Turner's Falls, Samuel organized a retreat from the successful attack on May 19, 1676. He was severely wounded himself and followed his father in death later that same year.

Lt. Thomas Cooper arrived on the ship Christian in 1635. He settled first in Windsor, but was working as a carpenter in Springfield by 1642. He built the first meeting house there in 1645 and was made a freeman by 1649. Cooper operated a ferry between the mouth of the Agawam River and Springfield, became a prominent fur trader and held a conspicuous seat in the meeting house. Cooper served as Selectman for 18 years, Clerk of the Writs and a militia officer. His stature grew with ownership of large tracts of land in Springfield, Suffield and what is now Agawam. He married Mary Slye and together they had nine children between 1642 and 1659.

On that fateful October day in 1675, Cooper and Thomas Miller were ambushed while approaching the Indian fort below Long Hill. The two were investigating rumors of an imminent Indian attack. Miller died instantly, but a wounded Cooper managed to ride back to the nearest house to warn Springfield residents before dying.

Neither Holyoke's nor Cooper's position on the Committee for Suffield was ever filled.

CURATOR'S REPORT

by Lester Smith

It's been a busy winter and spring, and some great new developments are taking place.

The biggest (at 1,400 square feet) is the old post-and-beam barn now under construction at the King House Museum. As many of our members may have read in the March issue of The Suffield Observer, the Society has purchased the frame of a mid-19th-century barn from Ontario, Canada. It would have been good to preserve a local barn, but we couldn't find a suitable candidate. When we were offered this one, it seemed just right. The barn will provide an excellent space to display our collection of horse-drawn vehicles, as well as our tobacco items too big for the loft exhibit in the King House.

The barn's concrete foundation was installed in the week of March 30 by Hinckley Construction and Accu Foundation; the frame's assembly (to be done by the seller, who took it apart in Canada) is expected to follow quickly. The roof and wall sheathing and other carpentry will come next, to be done by local contractor Brian Doyan. It seems likely that the barn will be ready when John Wells Loomis's cigar peddler's wagon comes home in a few months, fully restored.

That project began last June when restorer Jim Chevalier carried the old wagon off to his workshop in Belchertown, Mass. I have visited now and again during the restoration process to check the work, which has gone very well. In March the wagon body, essentially complete, came down to the decorative painter's shop in Somers for its striping and gilding. Chevalier will bring the wheels down for their stripes soon, and the undercarriage work is well along. I still feel immensely grateful for the donations and grants that made this restoration possible.

In the course of his work, Chevalier confirmed the age of the wagon – about 145 years – and determined that it was made by the Abbott and Downing carriage works in New Hampshire.

Another project that has advanced during the winter is the conversion of the small store room in the King House ell to become a climate-controlled archives room. We own many old documents, including John Wells Loomis's account books, that deserve better preservation conditions than we have been able to provide. We trust that the new facility will even encourage new donors to consider the Society as a good home for their own historical documents and memorabilia.

Along with the archives room, we are insulating the adjacent rest room, so we will no longer have to drain the pipes for the winter. Those of us who have been at the King House during our weekly work sessions throughout the winter will be quite appreciative.

When the museum opens on May 2, a new temporary exhibit will be in place, occupying the large, flat display case in the shed room and perhaps some additional space there. This will show the considerable progress that the Polish Heritage Society has made in documenting the history of Suffield's Polish community. The Historical Society is pleased to have been able to provide support to the Heritage Society, and the new exhibit should be a popular attraction.

THE WAY WE WERE...

Verne Spear will entertain the Society at our June meeting with photos and stories of old West Suffield. Born on North Grand Street, Verne has recently completed his autobiography, which he previewed at our Show and Tell last month. At 92, he recalls with great fondness his adventurous youth of nearly a century ago.

NEW MEMBERS

The Society welcomes new members: Martha Clark and Michael and Suzanne Petro.

BARN PHOTOS

In conjunction with our barn raising, we would like to print a 2010 calendar of Suffield barn photos to sell at this year's Suffield-on-the-Green. Is there anyone with a digital camera and the computer know-how who would like to make this happen? Or several someones? Call Anne Borg, 668-7841.

SPRING CLEAN-UP

Our springtime work day is scheduled for Saturday, April 25 from 9 a.m. to noon. Come help spruce up the King House museum and yard for its opening day ... and come see all the exciting changes taking place!

The presidential campaign of 1856 evolved from a nation deeply divided by slavery and political issues that were beginning to boil into what would become the Civil War. John Fremont was the candidate of the newly-formed Republican Party, Millard Fillmore led the American Party, and James Buchanan was the Democrat in the 1856 election process. Historian, composer and singer Rick Spencer will bring the music and history of this name-calling, mud-slinging campaign to life.
